SPRINGFIELD

STCC will offer free tax prep

Starting Jan. 24, Springfield Technical Community College will once again offer free income tax filing assistance for low- to moderate-income taxpayers.

The Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program will help students and community residents prepare and file basic federal and state tax returns. Tax help will be available by appointment from Jan. 24 through April 14.

IRS-trained volunteers from the community, including students, are certified to help filers prepare and securely submit their returns electronically. Volunteers are members of the Massachusetts Tax Assistance Coalition and can also prepare taxes for Connecticut and other surrounding states.

Administered through the School of Business and Information Technologies, the service is available to area residents who make less than $54,000 a year, including taxpayers who are disabled, elderly or have limited English. The program will help filers claim all available tax credits including the Earned Income Tax Credit, child tax credit and education credits.

"Through VITA, filers will get their refund just as fast as they would if they went to a commercial tax preparation company," said Janet Cummings, site coordinator. "It can often cost as much as $200 to $300 to have an outside company prepare a family's taxes, but our program is free, so there's significant savings."

The program serviced over 135 returns during its first year and the number increased to over 740 returns last year, said Leona Ittleman, dean of the School of Business and Information Technologies. As a result, the program – now in its fifth year at the college – returned more than $1.6 million in refunds and savings to the surrounding community.

Because of relationships with various financial literacy initiatives, one of the advantages of filing taxes at STCC is that clients can be referred to additional state and federal resources as well as local community services. One of the program's goals is to help students overcome economic barriers, continue with their education and move toward economic mobility.

"While this program is open to the community at large, STCC students are especially encouraged to use this resource to have their taxes prepared," Cummings said. "We want to help improve (students') school-life balance. If you're a student, contact us for an appointment and let us help you check another task off your list."

Appointments are available Wednesdays through Fridays, 12:30 to 3:30 p.m., and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. The VITA office is in Scibelli Hall (Building 2), Room 414.

"It's a friendly atmosphere," Cummings said. "It's a place to go where people will understand what folks are going through. There's no sales promotion, no pressure. We're just here to help them do their taxes."

Anyone who would like to take advantage of the program can learn more by visiting the college website, stcc. edu/vita or calling 413-755-4215 for an appointment. If accommodations for a disability are required to participate in this service, please let the office know when making an appointment. It may take up to two weeks to accommodate some requests.

office know when making an appointment. It may take up to two weeks to accommodate some requests.

Janet Cummings, right, STCC's VITA site coordinator, sits down with Linda Belton, chairwoman of office information technologies, in a space where qualifying students and community residents can get their taxes completed for free.

SPRINGFIELD

Grandkids due?

Baystate Medical Center will offer a class for grandparents-to-be on Sunday from 6 to 8 p.m. in the Lundy Boardroom in the Wesson Women & Infants Unit at the hospital on 759 Chestnut St. The class, designed for first-time grandparents or as a refresher for others, will offer information about current labor and delivery, infant feeding, and safety practices. There will also be a discussion of the role of grandparents and a tour of the birthing center.

Cost is $25 per couple. For more information, call the Parent Education Office at 413-794-5515, or go to bay statehealth.org/parented.